A Note from the Directors

Welcome and thank you for attending Afterimages 2013. We're excited that you are here to share our newest artistic work!

This semester UWSP students choreographed 23 new dances –11 of these you'll see in our concert tonight. Choreographing for Afterimages has challenged us to engage in critical and creative thinking as we've investigated inspirations, generated ideas and created choreography. The Noel Fine Arts Center Studio Theatre offers an intimate three-sided view of these innovative and personal dance works.

In mid-October, as a part of the full Afterimages season, we produced the fifth annual Afterimages Outtakes showing in our NFAC dance studio. Each of the twelve pieces presented revealed distinct artistry and choreographic risk. We received many positive comments and feedback from the over 150 audience members attended. We all agree that this was one of the most successful and inspirational Outtakes to date.

The works on tonight's program are equally inspiring and engaging examinations of the human experience. Student choreographers, dancers, musicians, and designers collaborated to fulfill ideas and inspire our audiences. All of the students involved in the Afterimages 2013 season have invested an extraordinary amount of wholehearted energy to bring these new works to life.

Afterimages is a one-of-a-kind collaboration—a fully student-produced concert season that invites peers to work together choreographing, directing, performing, designing and publicizing an event for large audiences. Thank you to our student adjudicator Kailey Field for her thoughtful and unique comments during the adjudication and selection process. Thanks too to the Afterimages stage management and crews for their important support behind the scenes. We appreciate and value all of the dance and design faculty's mentorship as we hone our creative voices and artistic spirits. We extend an especially big thank you to Afterimages faculty mentor Michael Estanich for his time, energy and commitment to our growth and development.

Thank you for supporting UWSP's Theatre & Dance Department and the power of collaboration. We invite you to dive in with us and enjoy Afterimages 2013.
