

Quality Initiative FEG Luncheon
November 18, 2016

Before Today (Hopefully)

Working groups have:

- Formed.
- Met at least once.
- Identified the group focus (question to answer, problem to solve, skills to cultivate, etc.)
- Planned a rough time line.
- Identified needed resources.

Plan for Today

Groups report out:

1. Who you are.
2. What your focus is.
3. What resources you need.

Who you are	Focus	Resources
Mindy King	Learning about AM and how it applies. Information Literacy.
Valerie Barske	US Diversity & Global Awareness. What is appropriate at the 100 level.	Examples of examples and assignments that work at the 100 level. Hidden premises? Modular assessment.
David Ozsvath	Sciences Evidence based conclusions Teaching modules across the curricula Hypothesis testing
Shiba Kar	How to apply this to natural resources and engineering, particularly numerical problem solving. Evidence Stakeholders Attitude mapping Mind mapping AAC&U CT Value Rubric	Software tools Assignments
Kym Buchanan	Arguing for certain professional practices Arguments about art	Resources to introduce argument mapping.

Susan LeBow	Diverse group Real life application Lessen concern with “right answer.” How to evaluate.	Tools for helping deepen conversation and identify underlying issues.  Tools for benchmarking.
Laurie Schmeling	Reading as writers Using AM to help structure their own arguments.
Cary Elza speaking for herself	Media literacy and critical analysis tools	Writing prompts
Joy O’Neil	Economic, Social, and Environmental issues, brining data together with natural and social sciences. Multiple perspectives. Emotion and critical thinking / decision making.
Amy Zlimen speaking for herself	Professional ethical decision making
Michelle Miller	Fact based decision making. Using facts and data appropriately (not ignoring or discounting them)

By Friday, December 16

Please email Todd Huspeni (thuspeni@uwsp.edu) with:

1. A brief description of your group’s project. (We won’t hold you to this statement, but it can help us to identify topics for future discussion and resources to provide.)
2. Any resources or support you would like to have. (No promises, but we’ll do the best we can.)

Plan for Spring Semester
