Recognizing our UWSP Students who Attended the Soil Science Society of America Conference!

Sydney Paoli, Natalie Gruben, Eleanor Gausmann, Erin Tschida, and Elliot Nimmer attended the conference in San Antonio, TX. They competed in a few student competitions like the Pedology Contest and Quiz Bowl and presented a poster about their club (Soil and Water Conservation Society) research and activities. The contest included 60 students from across the country. You all rock!

Elliot Nimmer won 2nd place in the Pedology Contest!

CONGRATULATIONS to the 2024-25 CNR Outstanding Teacher Award Recipient: HOLLY PETRILLO

“Dr. Petrillo is supportive and caring towards her students. She is great at teaching and so enthusiastic. I have really enjoyed taking her forest health classes.”

“Holly is such an outstanding professor. She is not only great at teaching whatever subject she is in, but she also had a heart of gold. She has helped me out on so many occasions even when I request something of her very last minute. She is just overall a wonderful person and a wonderful professor.”

“Super easy to talk to! Has a ton of knowledge to share and provides many opportunities to students.”

“I have never had a professor who grew my love for Forestry and the surrounding ecosystems as much as Dr. Petrillo. Dendrology this semester under her leadership has been my favorite class I've ever taken. In all my years of school. The 2 hour conversation she had during office hours with me and another student about the Kenya SFE Trip was the biggest factor in my application to this trip, and I can't stop telling people about how excited I am to go, and especially to go with a professor with such experience, love for that community, and intentionality in how she raises her family with a global perspective. She more than deserves this award.”

“Her real passion and investment in the topics she teaches shines through. It's evident that she's committed to having us learn these things because she truly believes they are important for us to know as future professionals in the field.”

“Holly is kind and understanding. Not only does she care about her students, but she cares about the community. I appreciate how she brings her understanding and expertise from her experiences outside of the classroom into her teaching to make the material applicable.”

“She is an excellent professor and always makes class interesting and understandable!”

BECOME A HUNTER EDUCATION INSTRUCTOR

You can earn one credit by taking NRES210 and become a DNR certified Hunter Education Instructor at the same time. This is a fun way to get an extra credit, build your resume, and be a contributor to the outdoor community by teaching others safe hunting practices, ethics, and conservation principles. Classes are Monday nights, 5:00-8:00, March 24 – April 28.

To request permission to register, pfarrell@uwsp.edu and provide your student ID number AND your DNR customer ID number.
