

Sheraton - Palace Hotel San Francisco, California

Wednesday - Sept 30.
6 P.M.

Hi!

The flight out was very pleasant - enjoyed the company of James L. Doi - now at the Center for the Study of Higher Education at Ann Arbor and formerly asst to Quincy Newton, former president of the University of Colorado.

upon arriving I rented a car from Hertz (I tried Avis first but they didn't have any - so Hertz got me in the driver's seat. (They were going to drop me from a building into the driver's seat but, fortunate for me, they didn't have any convertibles left so I entered through the regular door.)

The afternoon yesterday was one filled with memories - largely of nine years ago and our starting at Stanford. Let me re-count some of them for you -

- I drove up Palm Drive, the main "entrance" to the Stanford campus and recalled 9 years ago to the day when I drove to the campus to register -

- Registration was in progress and I went to the Calabog library and saw some of the faculty members who were there when I started - Cowley, Cross, Nixon, Bush, Cronman - Calabog was away, as was Thomas. Kinney, of course, was absent.

- I walked over to the inner Quad - sat on one of the benches there for a while and went into Memorial Church and benefited from the quiet and peace of that lovely structure.

- The sun was warm and bright and the air smelled good - the egyptus trees were frequent and these were sensations that were familiar.

- I drove back by way of El Camino Real - past the town and County Village - the Safeway store where we stopped - down Ravenswood and into Stauffer Village. Stauffer's hardware store has built some new structures in parts of the village - to the west and east of the main part - but the area where we did our laundry - our visit - where the children watched the Sat. A.M. movies - all the same. It seemed as though there were more youngsters around but other than that it was much the same.

I took the car back to the airport and caught the bus into S.F. Arriving here in the city by 6:30 p.m. I was tired last night and went to bed at 8:30 (watching T.V.).

The ASCO meetings have been well attended today and enjoyed seeing many who were at Ontario as well as others I have come to know in the last few years.

This afternoon, after the last meeting, I walked over to the Japanese consulate and obtained my visa for Japan. They processed it in 15 minutes and now I am all set for sailing into Japan. While there I picked a couple of magazines that I thought you would be interested in seeing - com

Studying them along - an extra copy of the longer
one for the Saito's -

Tonight I register for the Am. Council on Education meeting - have to go out to eat in a few minutes - and then back to the hotel for an early bedtime.

Open as all in my thoughts and prayers -

Love.
