Course description:

This class is an exploration of United States history from the perspective of immigration and multiculturalism. Through the lens of race and ethnicity, we will investigate the development of colonial North America and the United States. We will examine how racial and ethnic identities are rooted in historical context and how they have changed over time. This approach will provide a greater understanding and appreciation of the diverse people who have shaped the development of the United States that we live in today.

Learning outcomes:

This course meets the General Education Program requirement for Historical Perspectives and U.S. Diversity. By the end of this course you will be able to:

1. Describe how people and institutions in the United States have constructed diverse identities and cultures.
2. Explain how individuals in the United States have responded to the experience of discrimination and inequality.
3. Demonstrate understanding of and empathetic insight about diverse cultural perspectives in the United States.
4. Use primary sources as evidence to answer questions about historical change.
5. Describe differences among interpretations of colonial America and United States history.
6. Analyze institutional and cultural change in American society.

Grading and evaluation:

Grades in this course will consist of two exams, a book precis (a concise analytical review), six reflection papers based on course reading, and attendance. Your final grade will be determined as follows:

Two exams: 50% (25% each)

The New Jim Crow paper: 10%

Reflection papers (6 total): 30%

Attendance: 10%

Grading scale: (percentages)

A = 93-100

C+ = 77-79

D- = 60-62

A- = 90-92

C = 73-76

F = 0-59

B+ = 87-89

C- = 70-72

B = 83-86

D+ = 67-69

B- = 80-82

Assignments and responsibilities:

Attendance policy: First and foremost, students are expected to attend class. I will take attendance at every meeting. You are granted 3 unexcused absences. Every unexcused absence after that will result in a 2-point penalty in your final grade. For example, if you miss 5 classes (which is 2.5 weeks out of a 15-week class), that will result in a 4-point penalty in your final average. In general, I do not grant excused absences except in cases of a documented medical situation or a documented campus-approved event (field trips, athletic events). Students who miss a class are responsible for that class's content and must make their own effort to contact a peer in class to obtain any notes or other materials from the missed class.

Face covering requirement: All students, employees and visitors to any UW-Stevens Point campus or facility will be required to wear face coverings when inside campus buildings. This policy is in effect until further notice.

Reading: Most weeks we will read a chapter in the Takaki textbook. Pay close attention to the larger points Takaki is making each chapter and how each chapter section reinforces this larger theme. In the second half of the semester we will read Michelle Alexander's The New Jim Crow. This work describes the problems of structural racism, segregation, and disfranchisement that still pervade our society today.

Reflection papers: On six occasions in the semester, you will write reflection papers on the course reading. I will provide a prompt or series of questions to consider as you write your reflection. These assignments will help you make larger connections in the history of race and ethnicity. Some of the assignments will be based entirely on the Takaki reading and others will include a primary source document related to the weekly topic or theme. The assignments will prepare you for the midterm and final exams.

Analytical review: You are required to write a precis (a concise analytical review) on Michelle Alexander's The New Jim Crow. Detailed instructions for this assignment are posted in Canvas.

Exams: We will have a midterm and final exam in essay format. The essay questions will be posted one week before the due date. The questions will be broad and will ask you to discuss larger course themes. Reflection papers and class lectures will help you prepare for these tests.

Late penalties: Please make every effort to turn in assignments on time. A late penalty of one-letter grade will be applied for every day an assignment is late.

Schneidkies happen: If you are dealing with difficulties in your life that are interfering with your ability to work on this course, please let me know. We can work together to help you succeed.
