For fifteen years, I performed in a short play festival in Miami, Florida. The audiences loved the format and I grew to love it as well. These aren’t skits or sketches or vignettes but instead, complete plays that manage to tell a story with a beginning, middle and end – all in anywhere from 5 to 15 minutes. As the publicity material stated (and still does, as the festival continues to this day), “if you don’t like this play, wait five minutes and there’ll be another one.”

The plays are a fun challenge for actors as they are required to create multiple characters that are fully formed and different from each other, all in one evening’s performance. The plays are in different styles and tones and demand bold choices. They also require (and the students are getting the chance to practice) immaculate comic timing and well-executed physical business. These skills will come in handy in everything from classical theatre to situation comedy. The actors spent hours rehearsing every moment and I’m proud of all of them. You’ll see why when you watch SMALL WONDERS.

One other interesting note: the necessity to film these plays in order to follow appropriate safety protocols mean that the actors and designers are also getting a crash course in acting and designing for the camera.

Speaking of the designers, all of the designers for SMALL WONDERS are students, with generous support and guidance from their faculty/staff mentors. Many of these plays, by a Jewish New York playwright, are in the great tradition of Borscht Belt humor. The Borscht Belt was an area of upstate New York where mostly Jewish residents of New York City stayed at resorts during the summer months in the era before air conditioning and Caribbean cruises (think “Dirty Dancing”). Many famous comedians of the 20th century, from Milton Berle to Jerry Seinfeld, entertained at these resorts. Taking this cultural reference as a jumping off point, our scenic designer has created a setting that melds contemporary forms with mid-century architectural elements. He then added references to current comedy clubs and came up with a set that manages to combine color and form to create a wonderfully versatile arena for plays set all over the world.
Director’s Note

You may not know as much about stage managers, but they are the glue that really holds any show together, especially one with this many technical elements. They are also the only people other than the director who are at rehearsal every night. They don’t get applause at the end of the performance so I want to take this opportunity to applaud them publicly. We literally could not do this without them.

Lastly, this will be my final show at UWSP. After 21 years, I’m retiring at the end of the semester. It has been a glorious ride, and I will miss the campus, the community and most of all – the students. As the world seems to get darker with each crisis, I encourage you all to continue to support the arts, which represent, as always, a light at the end of the tunnel.

Stay well.

The mission of the Theatre and Dance Department is to serve

• Its majors and minors through curricular offerings and performance/production activities that heighten intellectual, artistic, cultural, and humane sensitivities.

• The general student population through curricular offerings and stage productions that engender an appreciation and understanding of the performing arts and their contribution to the cultural and aesthetic enrichment of life.

• The university community and general central Wisconsin population through the production of quality stage performances.

The Department of Theatre and Dance recognizes that we work on the cultural lands originally occupied by the HoChunk and Menominee peoples.

The UW-Stevens Point Theatre and Dance Department’s off-campus storage space is funded by the Green Fund. Having this storage space allows us to reuse props and materials; thus, we are able to lessen our environmental impact by decreasing the amount of materials sent to landfills.

The Green Fund’s mission is to encourage and fund projects that positively affect the sustainability of the UW-Stevens Point campus community. The fund accomplishes this by investing capital in long-term sustainable projects that affect the way our campus uses energy and our shared natural resources. The Green Fund receives money from student segregated fees that are allocated by a student committee.
While the Department of Theatre & Dance season will look a little different this year, the high-quality, creative, and entertaining experiences you are accustomed to will not! The university has spent the summer months devising safe strategies, recommendations, and plans to welcome students back to campus while also considering ways that UWSP can stay engaged with the community. Throughout this process, the Department of Theatre & Dance has had to pivot in a new direction and reimagine a season that reflects more thoughtfully the changing landscape of our world. The department’s faculty and staff are committed to offering a season where our students can share their talents and artistry with audiences. Though our audiences cannot be live this semester due to campus recommendations that prohibit large gatherings, I am thrilled to share that we have a remarkable virtual fall season planned. The projects are timely, personal, and outstanding examples of the creative energy and spirit of our department.

I hope you can join us online for what I am sure will be an exciting and new adventure for everyone!

Michael Estanich, Chair
Department of Theatre & Dance

CONTRIBUTE TO BACKSTAGE

Ticket sales are strong, yet cover only a portion of our production costs. Each year we rely on Backstage patrons’ support to create exceptional productions and endowments for student scholarships.

In addition, during the 2018-2019 season, BACKSTAGE patrons supported:

- BFA Acting and Musical Theatre Senior Showcase travel to New York City
- Students attending the American College Dance Association Conference
- Student scholarships

Thank you to participating businesses for their willingness to match employee contributions. If your employer has a matching gift program, please include their matching gift form with your reply.
