

Diagnostic Testing Resources – Learning Disabilities

The following are some of the regional diagnosticians who provide assessments of learning disabilities in this area. Diagnosticians bill for services. Due to the cost of assessments, it is recommended you contact your insurance company and inquire about coverage for an assessment. Be aware that clinics may have wait lists for services, as well.

Check with your insurance company to see if they will cover the cost of a “neuropsychological assessment” to help identify a learning disability or learning disorder. Since the above are merely suggestions and not recommendations, inquire with your health care provider or other professionals in your home area who may also qualify to complete an assessment.
