Someone once asked me if I thought February liked March. I said "No, but April May!".

Q: Why did Cinderella get kicked off the baseball team?

A: She always ran away from the ball.

Q: Why did the racing sausage give up his quest to become a Brewer?

A: Because he was the wurst.

Q: What did the glove say to the baseball?

A: Catch ya' later!

Bob didn't believe that Fred's dog could talk. So Fred asked his dog, "What's on top of a house?"

"Roof," the dog barked.

Bob wasn't convinced. So Fred asked the dog how sandpaper feels.

"Rough."

He still wasn't convinced.

"O.K., who was the greatest baseball player of all time?" Fred asked the dog.

"Ruth"!

Although April Fools' Day, also called All Fools' Day, has been celebrated for several centuries by different cultures, its exact origins remain a mystery.

Some historians speculate that April Fools' Day dates back to 1582, when France switched from the Julian calendar to the Gregorian calendar, as called for by the Council of Trent in 1563.

People who were slow to get the news or failed to recognize that the start of the new year had moved to January 1 and continued to celebrate it during the last week of March through April 1 became the butt of jokes and hoaxes.

These pranks included having paper fish placed on their backs and being referred to as "poisson d'avril" (April fish), said to symbolize a young, easily caught fish and a gullible person.

Historians have also linked April Fools' Day to festivals such as Hilaria, which was celebrated in ancient Rome at the end of March and involved people dressing up in disguises.

There's also speculation that April Fools' Day was tied to the vernal equinox, or first day of spring in the Northern Hemisphere, when Mother Nature fooled people with changing, unpredictable weather.

April Fools' Day spread throughout Britain during the 18th century. In Scotland, the tradition became a two-day event, starting with "hunting the gowk," in which people were sent on phony errands (gowk is a word for cuckoo bird, a symbol for fool) and followed by Tailie Day, which involved pranks played on people's derrieres, such as pinning fake tails or "kick me" signs on them.
