Catalogue Description:

Rental Textbook: Held & Posner, 17th and 18th Century Art

What we're really doing in here: It doesn't get any better than this class. The challenge comes from the period and geography, which are so vast that there's no possible way to do justice to it all. Actually, we'll have to be so choosy that we'll skip a remarkable swathe of awesome stuff, but that's what happens in a sweeping survey like this. We won't try to cram it all in, of course, but will pick various topics for concentration. A priori, the concentration will be on the Baroque period (17th century), specifically the Italian (everything), English (a bit of architecture) Spanish (painting) and Flemish (painting). In an ideal world, we will also get to at least some Dutch (painting) and French (all kinds of great stuff), but that list of topics is really two or three classes' worth already. Art 283 is a prerequisite for this course, and if you think over what we touched upon in that class from the Italian Baroque through the French, English and German Rococo, you get just a vague sense of the mighty achievements of this period. It's all fabulous stuff, made for many different fascinating reasons.

Warning: This syllabus constitutes THE RULES for this course. Treat This Syllabus as a Contract: Make sure you know what it in it.

Both you and I are bound by these rules. If I make a mistake somehow, it is my fault and it is up to me to correct it. You will never be left holding the bag. The course requirements will never be summarily changed: no pop-quizzes or other extra exercises will be inserted. You can mark the exams dates on your calendar and know that the exams will happen then. In short, you can count on this document. On the other hand, if you run afoul of anything printed in this syllabus, you will have NO recourse: the class takes place according to these rules. Period. This is a pretty straightforward class and I'm pretty easy to deal with, but the rules are not flexible. Everyone is treated the same, simply as a matter of fairness. I can't (and won't try to) keep track of you individually. I expect you to keep track of yourself, therefore, and the syllabus is the rules by which you need to do so.

Important announcements and other useful information concerning this class will be distributed by e-mail and a lot of stuff, including study images, will be posted to our D2L Site. NB: announcements will use the UWSP e-mail distribution list, so please check your UWSP e-mail account regularly, at least once a week, even if you are in the habit of communicating by another address, Twitter, Facebook or whatever. This is a requirement.

Please feel free to come talk to me at any time about any aspect of this class. I am more than happy to help you in any way that I can. I will be on campus daily Monday through Friday, more or less 8:30-2:00, and most weekends 9:00-ish to 2:00-ish as well. If I'm around, I'm available. C'mon in! If I'm not in my office I will put a card in the name slot on my office door telling you where to come look for me. Don't be bashful: you are the reason professors exist, and some of us love to be useful. If you have trouble running me down during the day, just nab me before or after class and we can make an appointment.

I do not return phone calls, however. If you need to talk to me I am readily available as is: the ball is in your court. Please do not attempt to contact me at home. You hereby have my permission, in writing, to wait until the next day.

Course Requirements and Significant Dates:

Lecture attendance and readings in the textbooks. 50 Minute Essay Exam: Monday 9 October (Week 6). 50 Minute Essay Exam: Friday 17 November (Week 11).

Term Paper Due: Wednesday 22 November.

Thanksgiving Break: Thursday 23 November – Sunday 26 November Alternative Due Date for Term Paper: Monday 27 November (see below) Final Exam: Wednesday, 20 December, at 8:00 AM (which is not my fault)

Please note: the Course Requirements are Requirements, not options: if you skip an exam, you will not have met the course requirements and will get an F for the semester regardless of your other scores. There is wiggle-room on attendance, however, since all lectures will be recorded and posted on D2L. The textbooks for this class are thorough and detailed, so they will support you well. Assigned readings are part of the course and I expect everyone to do them. Work the time needed for that into your schedule.

Exams will consist of slide IDs and essays (individual slides or comparisons), in standard Art History Essay format. If you don't recall this from Art 283, come chat. The exams will not be cumulative, including the final. There will NOT be other exercises, like Technical Term definitions, but I expect all relevant terms to be used appropriately in essays.

Term Paper instructions will be posted later in the semester. The Due Date for those is the day before Thanksgiving break. I strongly recommend taking it easy over break, as much as possible, and I don't want you working for this class during that time.

Alternative Due Date for Term Paper: if you actually need extra time to work on the paper, let me know before November 22, and I'll let you hand it in the Monday after break instead. But, really, hand it in on time so you can use the break to take an actual break.

I do not take roll and I do not need any sort of excuse for missing a regular class meeting. If you miss a regular class meeting, that material will be posted on D2L and you can catch up on it on your own.

THING YOU CAN DO IN THIS CLASS is simply not show up for an exam and expect to talk your way out of it afterwards. I regularly fail students who try to do this. If you have a conflict with an exam, like a field trip, sports team commitment, etc., come make arrangements in advance and we'll make arrangements. Even if you had a flawless excuse, if you don't come work out a solution in advance, you're dead (viz, "the worst thing you can do in this class", above). If a substantial emergency crops up at the last minute, you must document both the emergency itself and its last-minute timing. Colds, laryngitis and other minor ailments are not an excuse. If an emergency crops up, leave me an e-mail or answering machine message, BEFORE the exam (e-mail & voicemail record the arrival times of messages, so that will prove that you made the deadline). Then come in when you're better and we'll get matters straightened out. Exams must be made up within a calendar week of the scheduled date, unless we arrange otherwise.

Class discussion and visual analysis of works will be important components of this course. I reserve the right to raise your grade based on your in-class performance, but I will never lower your grade due to good-faith participation in the discussions. Conversely, I do reserve the right to lower the grade, fail or eject from the course anyone who disrupts the lectures or discussions. Conversing with the person next to you can qualify as disruption, even if it has to do with the subject at hand; if it's not part of the whole group's discussion it must wait until after class.

I do not allow the use of cell-phones, smart-phones, computers, netbooks, MP3 Players, I-Pods, I-Pads, any other sort of "pad" or ANY other electronic communication, recording or sound devices of any kind in class. Lecture recordings, Power-point PDFs and other study materials will all be posted in D2L.

Documented Learning Disabilities: I'm happy to accommodate students who have documented learning disabilities. If you need an accommodation you are certainly entitled to it. Everyone needs a fair shot at this class. Variations in testing format, etc. are all very easy to do. Come talk to me about your needs and I'll explain the procedure, or else go directly to the Disability and Assistive Technology Center in the LRC (Library) Room 609 (phone extension -3365). If you qualify, Disability Services will provide you with appropriate documentation that you will then bring to me for my signature. It is your responsibility to provide the documentation BEFORE exams start. Absolutely no accommodations can be made without it (that's the law: students with documented learning disabilities are entitled to accommodation, but they are also required to take care of the documentation in order to obtain it). Documentation submitted after an exam has been graded will not change the grade of the exam. I'm happy to help you with appropriate accommodation, but a learning disability does not absolve you of basic responsibility. Don't be bashful about this issue. Don't do badly on an exam before you get the accommodation to which you are entitled.

General Grading Criteria:

- A: Superior Work. Demonstrated detailed command of the subject, including historical, social and cultural interpretation, thoughtfully related to imagery and style. Creatively and lucidly expressed, consistently using appropriately sophisticated terminology and with everything spelled right. Obviously cares about the material, including well formulated personal opinions where appropriate. (etc. etc.; this is a notably demanding standard and I don't give very many A's.).
- B: Good Work. Demonstrated a solid command of the subject, in good detail, clearly expressed, with nothing important left out. Enough cultural context to make sense of the style, and a good command of appropriate terminology. Correct grammar and spelling. Clear, orderly, knowledgeable essay. Most essays by students who put serious focus into this class get grades in the B range.
- C: Competent Work. A reasonable job. Learned most of the facts and can reproduce some appropriate interpretation of them. Reasonable spelling. NB: Everything you say in a given essay can be correct and you can still earn a C if you leave out much. This is a pretty common essay grade.
- D: Less than Competent Work. Mostly correct, but insufficient. Didn't learn all the basic facts, couldn't make detailed arguments with the facts that were learned, etc. Indifferent spelling and key art terms not used. Discussion of style alone, with no cultural context to explain it, earns a D, even if the style is very well handled. Visually winging an essay just by looking at the slide is very dangerous. It is better than leaving a complete blank, but that's what it takes to make a winged essay look good.
- F: Failure. A diligent junior high school student could do better. Cheating earns an F too (0%).
